

U. S. WILL ATTEND
EXCHANGE PARLEYMellon Makes It Plain That Only Rates Are to Be Discussed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The United States has accepted an invitation extended by the reparations commission to attend a conference to consider the stabilization of exchange in connection with the matter of payments of German reparations, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced today.

Secretary Mellon made it very plain that the United States would not discuss any question other than the stabilization of exchange at the conference and would not permit the discussion of foreign debts to be brought up.

The federal reserve board has been empowered to name the American representative of the conference, but it probably will not be named until the American government has been consulted on the reparations commission.
